Aims and Scope
While Economic History and Business History are two distinct disciplines, their similarities are stronger than their differences. Since 1975 the Economic & Business History Society has brought scholars from these two fields together through its annual meetings and through the society’s journal, Essays in Economic & Business History. EEBH publishes high-quality research from all aspects of economic and business history. We welcome both empirical and non-empirical research, as well as pieces that, despite their high level of scholarship, may not fit nicely into the usual boxes valued by other outlets in economic or business history.

Essays in Economic & Business History

EEBH publishes each spring, however, articles are published on-line as they are accepted at ebhsoc.org/journal.

Information for Authors
EEBH is a double-blind, peer reviewed journal. We strive to make a decision within 10 weeks of submission. Initial submissions may be in any style, but accepted articles must conform to our style guidelines, which are available on our website.
Submit papers electronically at http://ebhsoc.org/. For more information contact the editor at taylo2je@cmich.edu.

Subscription Information
Individuals subscribe to the journal by becoming members of the Economic and Business History Society. The membership rate for 2013 is $30. Visit http://ebhsoc.org/membership/ to join. For institutional subscriptions and additional information on the journal, please contact Daniel Giedeman, Secretary-Treasurer, at giedemad@gvsu.edu.
